- Players are expected to protect their hands, make their intentions clear, follow the action, act in turn, keep cards visible and chips correctly stacked with higher denomination chips visible and identifiable at all times.
- Each player is required to keep all cards dealt to them in full view of the dealer at all times. The dealer is responsible to ensure compliance.
- Deliberately acting out of turn will not be tolerated.

- Only the seated player is permitted to play their hand and must do so without assistance, otherwise known as the no-coaching rule.

Poker Room Rules (continued)

- It shall be the responsibility of each player to ensure their hand has lost to the other hands at the table before discarding the hand.

- If any player folds after making a forced bet or blind bet or on a round of checking, that player's position shall continue to receive a card until there is a subsequent bet at the table.
- At the showdown, a winning hand must be clearly displayed in its entirety and properly identified. The player initiating the final bet shall be the first player to show their hand at the showdown; all other players who have not folded shall then reveal their hands in a clockwise rotation. Any player may concede the rights to the pot and discard the hand.
- The proper time to draw attention to an irregularity or ruling regarding a pot is before the next deal before the game ends or changes to another table. Otherwise, the result of a deal must stand.

Poker Room Proper Conduct

Each player in a poker game shall play the game solely to improve their chance of winning and shall take no action to improve another player's chance of winning. No one may communicate any information to another which could assist that player in the outcome of the poker game.

Poker Conduct

- A player who expects to be showing down the winning hand should show it immediately.
- There should be no intentional delay of the game.
- In most situations, a player who has no interest in the pot should still hold onto their hand although nobody has bet. They should not fold, even turn.
- A raise should be announced.
- A player going all-in should announce that fact.
- A player should turn all their cards face down when folding.
- A player is entitled to quit the game any time they choose without suffering criticism.
- Players should speak up and assist the dealer by calling attention to an error in the amount of a bet or improper reading of a hand.
- Discarded hands should be released on a low line of flight and at a moderate rate of speed. They should be directed toward the discarded cards in the center of the table, not the dealer's hands.

The following improper actions are grounds for warning or excluding a Player from the Poker Room:

- Lengthy post-mortems about a hand.
- Agreeing to check a hand to showdown.
- Deliberately stalling the action of a game.
- Hiding larger denomination chips and/or cash.
- Deliberately acting out of turn or influencing action in the game.
- Reading a hand for another player during showdown before it has been placed face up on the table.
- Telling anyone to turn a hand face up at showdown.
- Criticism of the way another player has elected to play their hand or their general style of play.
- Talk or action demeaning to the dealer or player will not be tolerated. Throwing cards, name-calling, and other such uncivilized behavior will be grounds for suspending or barring any player from the card room.

Waiting List/Seating

- When the Poker Room opens for business, phone calls and/or in-person registration will be accepted to add your name onto the games waiting list.
- All call-ins have two hours to arrive, or your name will be deleted from the waiting list.
- In-person registration may also be completed at the poker kiosk located outside of the poker room during poker room hours.
- All vacant seats shall be filled in a first come first served basis.
- It is the player's responsibility to listen for their name being called to a game. Players who intend to leave the property should notify the list-person at the poker room desk.
- Players may not hold a seat in more than one game.
- Permission is required before taking a seat in any game.

The Buy-In

- When entering a game, a full buy-in is required. In Limit-Poker, a full buy-in is five times the maximum bet, unless designated otherwise.
- You are allowed to make only one short buy-in for a game. Adding to your stack is not considered a buy-in and may be done in any quantity between hands.
- A player who is forced to transfer from a broken game, or to a must move game, to a game of the same limit, may continue to play the same amount, even if it is less than the minimum buy-in. A player switching games voluntarily must have the proper buy-in size for the new game.

Dinner Break Rules

- One-hour dinner break is allowed per 8-hour session.
- Rack up your chips and give to the Poker Room Supervisor at the desk.
- Poker Room Supervisor will count/verify chips.
- Your name will be placed at the top of the games waiting list as a call-in.
- Poker will seat the next person waiting on the list to ensure the game remains open.
- Once you return from dinner break you will be seated in the next available open seat.
- Decisions of the Poker Room Supervisor on duty are final.
